DERS OF JUDGE HOLT.

Some new developments are promised in the joint war within the next forty-eight hours. County Attorney Miller was seen yesterday and stated that he had filed with the clerk of the common pleas court precipes in every old injunction suit pending against jointkeepers in that court. So much for the anti-joint people. But they have one more obstacle to remove. Clerk Howlett appears to be in no hurry to get out the orders of abatement and until he does his duty no raids can be made. He claims that he is back with his work and cannot find time to get out the orders. The court journals, or records in his office, are no posted up to date and until he gets this work done he says he can't "monkey" with liquor injunctions. It is known that County Attorney Miller assumed the clerk's duty when he took it upon himself to prepare the journal entries in the old injunction cases, but he did this because the anti-joint people were blaming him for making a farce out of the judgments of the common pleas court. It certainly seems strange that the orders of the courts can be trampled upon by jointkeepers and completely ignored. Some of these injunctions are more than two years old. They were made permanent and the court ordered them closed. The judgment of the court has received no more attention than if it had been handed down by some boot-

The existing state of affairs is thoroughly arousing the better element of people and criminal proceedings may be instituted against certain officials. There is a little contention existing among the brewers, as it is claimed that a certain brewery owns it is claimed that a certain officials. It is claimed that in the recent raids made on joints no place was touched that used the beer sold by this brewery. There were thirteen orders given to Sheriff Longfellow in the first batch gotten out and all of these places were

If this is true, ten of these orders were lost, either on the way to the clerk's office or after they reached the clerk's office. Clerk Howlett was seen in regard to the missing orders and stated that the county attorney had sent over only thirteen orders. County At-torney Miller was seen again and stated that he was mistaken in the number. A that he was mistaken in the number. ## THEY GOT OFF EASILY.

Four Gamblers Fined in Police Co .rt When the Statutes Make Gambling a Felony.

bling a Felony.

Detectives Walsh and Quarles, and Officer Kinman discovered four men sitting around a table in a vacant room adjoining a joint near the Junction Wednesday night. They were playing cards. The game might have been "seven-up." it might have been "seven-up." it might have been "seven-up." it might have been pitch: possibly it was "whist." and probably it was "draw poker." The police did not know which, but the players were arrested, taken to police headquarters and booked on the charge of gambling.

They were arraigned in police court yesterday morning and were assessed a fine of $10 each. They paid their fines and left the station with no ill-feelings toward anybody. Now gambling is a felony if the Kansas statutes are consulted, and everyone knows that police courts were never and to the station with the police courts were never and the trustate ages. Kansas statutes are consulted, and everyone knows that police courts were never created to try state cases. The local police court does it occasionally, however.

Of course, had any of the four men raised an objection to Judge Manning imposing a fine on them the fine could have been easily avoided by carrying the case to the proper court, but then if they should be convicted in a court that has jurisdiction to try such cases the penalty would be a term in the penitentiary instead of a 310 fine. The four men gave their names as Charles Cotton, C. L. Johnson, Charles Anderson and Fred Morrison. These are not their correct names, but they did very well for this occasion.

Chief Bluejacket Gave His Deposition in the Suit to Recover Valuable Indian Lands.

able Indian Lands.

Charles Bluejacket, the aged Shawnee chief, came to this city a few days ago to locate the grave of the Shawnee prophet. He did not lecate the grave, but his trip to this city resulted in some good.

Some time ago Autorney T. P. Anderson filed a suit in the supreme court to recover valuable lands in Johnson county on an old Indian deed. The plaintiff in the suit is Joseph Fritz and the defendant is Alexander Love. As the deed on which the plaintiff hopes to recover the land dates back to the Indian days in this section of the state. Attorney Anderson took advantage of the presence of Chief Bluejacket in this city and secured his deposition.

The aged chief was escorted to the law office of Anderson & Henderson, where he remained all afternoon giving his testimony before a notary. Chief Bluejacket proved to be an excellent witness. He was personally acquainted with nearly every Indian whose name was mentioned to him during the examination. He knew the land in controversy and knew all the Indians that ever inhabited it. The deposition of flue-facket will be very valuable testimony and will be introduced in the supreme court when the case is called for hearing.

Three Divorce Suits Filed.

Three Divorce Suits Filed.

Three unhappy couples appealed to the district court yesterday for legal separations. George F. Garrett brought suit against Fannie Garrett, alleging adultery. They were married on Christmas day, 1884. Anna C. Harmanson sued John P. Harmanson for divorce. They were married at Gentenburgh, Sweden, on May 5, 1886. They came to this country soon after their marriage and located in this country. Mrs. Harmanson charges extreme cruelty and gross neglect of duty. In addition to an absolute decree she asks the court for the custody of their three minor children.

Seymore Swangden wants a divorce from Minnie Swangden. They were married on May 5, 1896. They lived together only a short time. The defendant is charged with adultery.

She Was Not Looking as Pretty as She Thought-An X-Ray Incident.

They had just got the new scheme fo inspecting baggage by X ray in operation, and the haughty young woman who had just got off the steamer was waiting to have hers inspected, says the Chicago Post. Furthermore, she thought there had been more delay than was necessary and she was somewhat provoked. Consequently when one of the officials motioned her to step a little to one side she declined to move. There was a short consultation among the officials and one of them finally advanced oward her.

"If madame would kindly-" he began. "It madame would kindly—" he began.
"Sir!" she interrupted, haughtilly.
"It would be a great favor if you would move a little." he said, rather diffidently.
"Why should 12" she demanded. "It is decidedly presumptuous in you to speak to me at all. I ve been walting here fifteen minutes for my baggage, and during that time you haven't done a thing but stand there and look at me and talk to the other inspectors." spectors."
"The fact is," explained the man in the same diffident way, as if something wor-ried him, "that you are in the way," "Of what?" she asked. "It seems to me that you are the most impudent set of offi-cials that I ever knew. The idea of asking me to move as a mere matter of convenience to you! There's plenty of room to in spect the baggage without annoying me and you ought to be at work at it now." "But we can't." protested the man. "You see, we don't open the trunks any more. We just put them under the X rays and inspect them that way."

"Well, why don't you do it?" she demand-

UNDYING TRUTH WILL CUT.

OR SO MUCH OF IT AS NECESSARY IN THE CASE.

The Same Being a Truthful Chronicle of the Affliction of King Ki Ki and the Where

There could be no doubt about it. All of the Merry Fellows were talking about it. The King, himself, suspected it. Ki Ki

It was the sole topic of gossip in the glorious realm of Don't Care. The knights and courtiers passed many a merry jest over their foaming flagons in consequence of the wonderful event. The King's fool wrote a poem about it, in which he talked of my lady's eyebrows and her soft, dreamy eye-flashes. He even went so far as t refer to her shocks of yellow hair, that, like silken floss of the maize, hung over her shoulders. As a cold matter of fact, her hair was not of the drug store variety;

her hair was not of the drug store variety; it was dark-like the wing of night. But he was only a King's fool and a poet, and it was not cherished against him.

The King had never been in love before. Cnce when he had the malaria he summoned all of the wise men of his domain, all of the physicians skilled in the necromancy of modern medicine, all of the young men who have been there, and described his symptoms. Long they pondered over the problem. At first they were all inclined to the opinion that his was a genuine case of googly goo; but finally a crabbed-looking septuagenarian exclaimed:

genuine case of googly goo; but finally a crabbed-looking septuagenarian exclaimed:

"It cannot be that the King is in love. Forsooth, does he not retain possession of his faculties?"

And they decided to fill the King with quinine and see if the words of the ancient who still uses forsooth were true. And it came to pass that the quinine knocked the King's malady higher than Gilroy's kite, the altitudinosity of which has never been accurately determined.

This was long ago. The King had often thought of his first case of mistaken identity; he had even read of Maud Muller and wondered if the "u" wasn't a typographical error and had been used in the days of hand composition in place of "1." But this time he could not escape the haunting thought that he was in love. He had never felt so in his life before. He sent for his own physician and said:

"I charge thee by my halldon, tell me true. I am out of sorts; I can't sleep at night; I am troubled with a flushed countenance; I have chills, loss of ambition: I actually read poetry and like it. You can't linagine how I suffer. What is wrong with me?"

"It's the surest case I ever seen," an-

"It's the surest case I ever seen," answered the doctor, who had left his gramswered the doctor, who had left his grammar at home.

Is it any wonder that the wonderful news spread throughout the kingdom; that it traveled into the tributary provinces of Mirth and Jollity? All of the maidens fair wondered who was the fortunate one who had captured the heart of the kingliest King that ever wore a 7% crown. The King sent for his fool.

"Fool," said he, "fool, I am in love."
"You are in luck," replied the fool.
"Now, hearken. To you shall be entrusted the delicate task of conveying to the object of my adoration protestation of undy-

Tell her that I love her better than life itself; I dream of her by night and think of nothing but her by day. Tell her I love her better than anything on earth or in heaven. Let me hear how you will do it."

"Most gracious sovereign, I'll tell her that "Most gracious sovereign, I'll tell ner that you love her like a house afire."

"Thunderation and shade of Mars, no! Coddle your wizzen and study the society pages of the Sunday newspapers for adjectives—you will find them all there. Give a gentle genuflection to your voice, let your eyes roll a little, speak slowly, like a man telling the story of his life, and give out the impression that the best part is yet to come. Now, go! and when you return bring me a favorable answer. Avaunt!"

"But what's her name, most noble ruler bring me a favorable answer. Avaunt?"

"But what's her name, most noble ruler of the realms of Don't Care? Who is this unexampled paragon of excellence?"

"Pallas Athene." breathed the King, "and I, King Ki Ki, love her madly."

"Well, this beats me," muttered the fool to himself, as he trudged along the bicycle path that leads to the domains of the fair daughter of Jupiter. "A King full is a good thing at the right moment, but a King in love is enough to stop anybody's clock."

"Behold, the fool approaches," shouted the herald in the front door of the royal palace of the Athenian divinity.

"Make way for the fool," chorused the underheralds.

"Where is he?"
"That's not half bad for a knave. But "Where is he?"
"That's not half bad for a knave. But get a move on you."

The Queen was sitting on her throne with her crown on straight when the fool was ushered into her presence. She smiled visibly at the approach of the fool.

"How do you do, Queen." said the fool, "is this weather hot enough for you?"
"Presumptuous mortal, what errand brings you to these domains?"
"Well, Queen, I have a message for you from the ruler of the golden realms of the land of Don't Care, King Ki Ki by name. I came to tell you that he is in love."

"Does King Ki Ki imagine that I am interested in his affections of the heart?"
"He has no imagination, Queen, except when he is in his cups, and then we usually the him to the floor Of course, he doesn't really see them; he only imagines he does."

"But the message?"

doesn't really see them, he only imagines he does."

"But the message?"

"There's a woman's curiosity for you. Queen, I come to offer unto you the heart and hand, the tenements and heriditaments, of King Ki Ki, ruler over the land of Don't Care, where the sun never dims and the song birds never sleep; where the wind is laden with the perfumes of perpetually blooming flowers and where nothing is what it seems. The King loves you madly—I have the words dew-laden from his lips—he thinks you are a jewel queen and he says that if you will have him he will pay the first installment on a bleyde built for two. I will now sing you, the latest song he has composed about you."

"Not to-day, you won't, my fair Cherry brother. Now, as for your King. You may tell him that, according to the encyclopedia, I am the legitimate daughter of Jupiter, incidentally a goddess of wisdom and one of the principal divinities of the Greek mythology. I preside over the sciences, inventions, arts of peace, laws, etc. Besides, just now. I am preparing for my annual visit to my subjects at Kansas City. Marriage is not for me; I am sorry; it ill becomes a queen to give offense. Tell King Ki Ki that I will be a sister to him."

"Well, give me the answer, ere I throthim."

"Well, give me the answer, ere I throttle you and take it from your breathless corpse," shouted the King when the fool returned to his throneroom. "What did she say?"
"She said 'Nit,' or words to that effect.'
"Liar. Thou art deceiving me. She could "Liar. Thou art deceiving me. She could not reject my offer. Come, tell me her an-"Well, sire, she said she thought you

"Well, sire, she said she thought you were a pretty good king in your way, but she cannot share ownership in the bleycle because she is going to visit the people of Kansas City and hasn't time to take a day off and get married."

"By all of the imprecations I ever heard, by all the prolife profamity I ever read, but this is too much. I, too, Ki Ki, ruler of the good times that are and that are to be, lever of fun and inventor of trolic, pacemaker for frivolity, and builder of the cinder path for Time to coast upon—I, I, I, too, will be there. I will show the Queen a hot time in the old town. We'll take all the merrymakers of our spacious realm, all the funny fellows from the broad acres of our domain, all the laugh producers, all of the sorrow chasers, all of the wrinkle eradicators, all of the life renewers, and we will show the Queen where we live. We will make life sweeter and better. Men may laugh to see us come, but they will sorrow when we depart, for we make life worth the living and death not worth the dying. Go out and tell the band to play.

POLICE AND FIRE SIGNAL BOXES

They Are in Working Order and Wil Be Put in Use Today.

The new police and fire alarm signal sys em will be inaugurated to-day. Hayes gave out keys to all the patrolmen n Nos. 1 and 2 districts yesterday and they spent the day in getting used to the new order of things. All of the boxes save one was connected with the switchboard at No. 1 station. This box is located at Third street and Grand avenue. The linemen have not reached it yet. When Officer John Mar tin received his key he went out to try one of the boxes. He selected the one at Third and Grand avenue. When he opened it and took up the receiver to the telephone, expecting to get a reply from the operator at No. 1, he was surprised to get no answer at all. After opening and shutting the box several times, with no better success, Martin grew desperate and began to say things not calculated to please even a dumb telephone. Looking all around the box, Martin was about returning to the station and reporting a defective signal box, when a farmer came to his rescue, and, pointing out the lack of wires, said: "Wall, I guess you'd git a hetter connection ef ye had wires on that thar thing, wouldn't ye?"

Another patrolman, who had been told that the boxes registered his exact location when he "pulled" it, sought to find out for himself. He might not be able to "make his points" some time and wondered if he could not fool the operator. Stepping up to a box in No. 4 precinct, which has been working for two days, he turned in a call. "Whar am I at?" he asked.

A second elapsed while the operator correctly "located" him.

"That's right! That's right," replied the patrolman, as he hung up the receiver and closed the box. of the boxes. He selected the one at Third

FOUND BY A FORTUNE TELLER. Young Girl Described by the Fortune Teller as the Thief Arrested and Confesses. A case of robbery that has baffled the sleuths of the city police department has been unveiled at Lancaster, Pa., by a fortune teller, and, as a result of the dis-fortune teller, and, as a result of the dis-closures made, Ella Rehm, 14 years old, has been arrested and charged with robbing her benefactor.

Two months ago, Ella Rehm applied to Mrs. Joseph Bitner for employment. It was given her. Three weeks ago Mrs. Bitner missed a watch, gold medal and some valuable jewels. The police were notified of the robbery. They worked on the case for two weeks, gaining no clue or information. the case for two weeks, gaining no clue or information.

Mrs. Bitner had been advised by friends to seek the aid of a fortune teller. She did so and was told where she would find the lost valuables hidden. She followed directions and recovered them. Mrs. Bitner was given a description of the thief, which tallied exactly with the girl, Ella.

Mrs. Bitner missed $168 from a cash box in her bedroom a few days ago. A second report was made to police headquarters. Detectives failed to find a clue. The fortune teller was again sought. In the second seance the fortune teller said the girl Ella was the thief, but in this instance could give no clue as to where the money was hidden.

A BLACK HILLS STRIKE. Immense Body of Iron Pyrites Uncovered Near Deadwood, The Hardin Mining and Manufacturing Company at the 200 feet level has struck an immense body of pyrites of iron ore. The vein so far is fourteen feet thick and they are still in ore.

John Blatchford, superintendent for the Golden Reward Company, thinks it may be 109 feet thick by its appearance. The value of ore is richer as depth is obtained. Assays from the bottom of the shaft are going as high as $65 per ton.

This property was purchased by Chicago Union stock yards parties and they have been developing it since the purchase. It is by far the most important find on account of its richness and magnitude ever discovered in the Black hills. The property consists of 1,100 acres and is located two miles east of Deadwood. vein so far is fourteen feet thick and they Unsanitary Methods Complained Of. Unsanitary Methods Complained Of.

The board of public works met yesterday and audited bills for the last half of September. The unsanitary condition of many of the public sewers and catch basins was discussed. Superintendent Davis complained that persons living in the immediate vicinity of catch basins in all parts of the city were in the habit of dumping slops and kitcher refuse into them. This was especially true in the cases of saloon porters. Flushing some of these sewers only partially cleaned them. Mr. Davis suggested that the board buy disinfectants and request the police to keep a closer watch request the police to keep a closer watch upon the catch basins. No action was tak-

Pasco Grading.

The members of the park board and George E. Kessler, the board's secretary and landscape architect, went over the ground that will constitute the North and South paseos yesterday, with a view to determining how the grades of the same should be established. Mr. Haff will prepare ordinances providing for doing the grading and they will be submitted to the city council at its meeting to-night.

Say He Can't Have the Cash, The lower house finance committee met yesterday afternoon and decided to report adversely on the claim of D. J. Haff, the park board's attorney, for $8.33, the amount of his salary for the first half of September, which the lower house had refused to allow because he was absent in Mexico during that time.

KANSAS CITY'S NEW LIMITS.

WILL BE AGREED UPON AT A MEET-ING TO BE HELD TO-DAY.

Mayor Jones and Other City Officials View the Proposed New Territory -Extension Ordinance to Be Submitted Monday Night.

Mayor Jones, City Counselor Middlebrook, Assistant City Counselor Winn, City Engineer Wise and Deputy City Clerk Sloan territory adjoining Kansas City on the outh and east, with a view to determining how much of it should be annexed to Ka sas City at the same time that Westnort i taken in. They decided that, in order to avoid taking in large corn and clover fields, a number of jogs must be made in the pro-posed new east line of the city. It is th intention to annex all of the territory adoining the city in which there are populations sufficiently dense to warrant their annexation. At the same time it is not in-tended to take in large strips of farming ands that will be devoted to agricultura ourposes for many years to come, as was done in 1890 when the eastern limits of the city were extended to the Big Blue river. It was agreed by the mayor and the other ity officials who accompanied him on the tour of investigation that the following ought to be the lines of the Greater Kan-sas City: Beginning at the point where ought to be the lines of the Greater Kansas City: Beginning at the point where Mersington street, which is the extension of Cleveland avenue north of Independence avenue, intersects with the south line of the Missouri river, and running thence to the line between sections 25 and 35, thence east to Fairview avenue, thence south to Twenty-seventh street, thence west to Jackson avenue, thence south to Thirty-first street, thence west to Indiana avenue, thence south to Thirty-first street, thence west to Indiana avenue, thence south to Brush creek, thence to a point about half a mile east of the state line. From there the new line will proceed to Forty-seventh street, the present extreme south limit of Westpert. It will then follow the irregular limits of that city to the state line.

A meeting of city officials, at which Mayor Drake, of Westport, will be present, will be held at 10 o'clock this morning in the mayor's office for the purpose of definitely deciding whether these lines shall be incorporated in the extension ordinance or whether changes should be made in them.

In speaking about the extension matter last night Mayor Jones said: "Wy object

In speaking about the extension matter last night, Mayor Jones said: "My object is to avoid taking in farming land as far as possible. In going over the ground east and south of the city to-day I became convinced that no judgment was used in making the extension of 1890. Those who devised that extension must have thought that Kansas City would have a million people inside of five years. We have outlined the proposed new limits in such a way as to have them run along well established streets or well traveled roads.

"It will not be possible to get the extension ordinance ready for introduction in the council meeting to-morrow night. But it will be ready to introduce at the regular monthly meeting to be held next Monday night. Before it is introduced it will be submitted to a number of lawyers who are well up in constitutional and charter laws, and they will be asked to read it carefully and point out any defects that it may contain. It is the intention to make the ordinance as near perfect as it can be made, in order that it may successfully withstand the assaults of those who will seek to knock out the extension by appeals to the courts."

In speaking about the extension matter ast night, Mayor Jones said: "My object

STOLE FOUR LEFTS.

Mary Kelly Wanted Shoes, Helped Herself, but Revealed a Very Bad Eye. Mary Kelly has fallen from grace. For years she has been one of the most prominent female drunkards and police habitues in the city. Yesterday Officer Conole found Mary helping herself to shoe in front of Carlat's shoe store, at 613 Main street, and arrested her. Mary rebelled, saying the shoes belonged to her, but she was sent to headquarters. She had taken four shoes of odd sizes and all "lefts."

Will Now Preach in the Shadows. Charles Carroll and Andrew Sollen, the street preachers who were arrested Satur-day for holding meetings at Eleventh and Main streets, were discharged by Police Judge Gifford yesterday. Chief Hayes and Judge Gifford had agreed to give the men nother chance another chance.
"If you will promise not to hold any more meetings where the listeners will blockade the streets," said Judge Gifford,
"I will release you. If you come before me again I will be compelled to send you

The men promised to select secluded spots for their meetings in the future, and were permitted to go. His Wife Directed His Arrest. James Neubanks, of Liberty, Mo., was arrested yesterday by Officer Whalen in a disorderly house at Seventh and Wyandotte streets and held at Central station on a charge of frequenting disorderly houses. Neubank's wife wrote to Chief Hayes that her husband had taken $160 belonging to her, and she wanted him arrested. He had little money left.

Charles Smith, who says he recently came from La Cygne, Kas., was found by an officer in Hucke's hardware store, 569 Main street, at an early hour this morning, and taken to police headquarters and locked up. When discovered he was collecting some choice specimens from the stock of razors and knives in the store.

Spitting Fine Raised a Notch. Fred W. Fisher, a traveling man, living at 2818 Cherry street, who was arrested in front of the Emery. Bird. Thayer Dry Goods Company's store Monday for being disorderly by spitting on the sidewalk and Indulging in loud talk, was fined $2 by Po-lice Judge Gifford yesterday.

Arrested for Carcless Driving. M. L. Hines, a driver for a transfer company at Sixth and Walnut streets, was arrested yesterday for carclessly driving into the buggy of Mrs. H. Cease, at Missouri and Grand avenues, and wrecking a wheel. He gave bond for his appearance in police court to-day.
